Domiciliary company declaration

Domiciliary companies are considered to be domestic and foreign legal entities, companies, establishments and similar associations that do not engage in any commercial or manufacturing business or any other form of commercial operation. There are indications that this is the case if there are not any business premises and/or no personnel are employed.

A domiciliary company cannot be a beneficial owner itself. If the applying company has been declared a domiciliary company, a third-party natural or legal entity must be specified as the beneficial owner.

Please answer the following questions:

- a) Do you have your own office i.e. no c/o address, your registered office is not at a lawyer's office/trust company/bank? Yes No
- b) Do you employ your own staff? Yes No
- c) Is your company a domiciliary company? Yes No Reason if No was marked with a cross for both a) and/or b) and c):
